Q.2 In the early Twentieth Century the British government made the following declaration regarding the creation of a homeland for Jewish people: "His Majesty's government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavours to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country". To what extent do you agree or disagree that in principle this was the right position for the British government to adopt?
